great Boxer outbreak in June 1900 A.D., but some misapprehension may be removed, and the reader of this volume may be led to more easily understand the state of affairs which obtained immediately before hostilities broke out, if a short explanation be given.

One hears many different opinions as to the reason of the Boxer outbreak, which every one will admit was the most important "casus belli" between the European Powers and China, and which eventually plunged the north of China into a sanguinary war which was waged on both sides with great fierceness

Mechanical printing problems

The combined production total of pig iron for all three furnaces is recorded at 126,122 clearing approximately 41,620 acres. The forests of eastern Kentucky have been an important resource since the beginning of historic settlement. Wood fueled the numerous iron furnaces springing up in the area creating a substantial impact on the forest with the clear cutting.

Furnace owners typically acquired a large tract of land surrounding each of the iron furnaces for charcoal production. For example, the Fitchburg Furnace enterprise acquired the 4-mile circle containing 32,254 acres before the furnace construction.

Layout problems

ere was some difficulty in determining the original tract of 32,154 acres.

act 1 - Known as the Furnace Tract, 154 acres.

act 2- Known as the Forge Tract, 1,066 acres.

act 3 - Cobb Mountain Tract, 175 acres.
The total acreage is in excess of 12,000 acres.

my long hours were spent in the field, receiving the process of the land. I have intimate knowledge of names, families, and their help through the years. To be able to sell by sale until you have an accurate map, the next move was to obtain statements from the landowners whose boundary lines coincided with the original tract.

Just how many acres was left from the original tract after the following tracts are involved:

act 1 - Known as the Furnace Tract, 154 acres.

act 3 - Cobb Mountain Tract, 175 acres.

County Courthouse tracking the 88 landowners who had rendered 1.96 acres, upon which I had rendered this work, I acquired a general history which has been a major task. Over 50,000 acres and portray it in a map of what is left was no small task. My next move was to obtain statements from the adjoining landowners whose boundary lines coincided with the original tract.

Before the Altar

Before the Altar, bowed, he stands.

With empty hands;

Upon it perfumed offerings burn

Wreathing with smoke the sacrificial urn.

- ▣ Know what kinds of problems to look for
- ▣ Know which publishers are problematic
